BROKEN ARM NO BAR TO COLLEGE ACTOR

Aloysius Kane to Appear in Gonzaga Play Despite Recent Severe Accident.

A little thing like the breaking of an arm should not interfere with a good actor's career, according to Aloysius Kane, of the Gonzaga Dramatic Association, who, in spite of the fact that his own arm was broken six days ago, insists upon appearing in the college play, "The Merchant of Venice," Monday night in Gonzaga auditorium.

The college physician stoutly insisted that Kane must abandon the play, but finally gave a reluctant assent. The young actor will appear in the role of Nerissa, and, although his arm will be in splints, he thinks he will be able to do credit to William Shakespeare. The college boys are so anxious to see Kane that they are arranging a "large send-off" when he takes out on the stage.

The production of Monday night will be the first event of a series in the program arranged to honor golden jubilee year at Gonzaga. Secretary and Mrs. Tumulty Justice and Mrs. C. J. Smyth, members of the diplomatic corps, and dramatic classes from several colleges have made reservations for the show, and it is probable that the boys will have to repeat their performance in order to accommodate the demand for seats.

EDWARD C. TOMLINSON.

Edward C. Tomlinson, car accountant for the Southern railway system, died at 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning at his home, 3426 Nineteenth street northwest. Death, it was stated, was due to heart disease. The body will be sent to his old home in Philadelphia, where interment will be made tomorrow. A delegation of his colleagues in the Southern railway office will attend the funeral.

Mr. Tomlinson was sixty-three years old. He started his railway career as a telegraph operator on the Philadelphia and Reading railway, rising to the position of superintendent of the New York division of that system. In 1903 he went to the Queen and Crescent route, at Cincinnati, Ohio, as superintendent of transportation. Upon the consolidation of the Queen and Crescent with the Southern railway in 1907 he was brought to Washington as car accountant. He is survived by his wife.
